

“In the beginning...”

...there was one movie club.

After a high demand for Noah on the Facebook poll there a rush to organize a trip to the cinemas to watch Noah. After all if it's got Russell Crowe it must be good. The day came and we managed to get a group of eager students lining up to attend.

Unfortunately all who attended were all camera shy and we didn't get group photos but they did show their appreciation on the club's Facebook page. Everyone came away from the event with large smiles and the movie sparked a great discussion about movies containing 'religious' themes and their faithfulness to the text they are based upon.

“In the end...”

Noah was produced to portray the director's point of view of the famous biblical story about a man name Noah and the flood. However, that's all they took from the bible and the rest was not related at all to the bible.

However the movie effects and the director's spin on the story line were amazing. As a group we all talked about how amazing the rock giants were and the battle scene to get to the ark was the highlight of the movie. The acting was epic with most actors/actresses as Oscar nominees/winners which is always a bonus to have a fantastic cast.

All in all it was a great movie and highly recommend for all age groups.
